9. QUESTION: (INCLUDE SCENARIO IF NEEDED FOR CLARITY):

ACIN I-84-09 and ACIN I-84-09E state "If a 20 year old household member is receiving food stamps as part of his/her parents' household and an overissuance occurs, all adult household members residing in the household when the overissuance occurred, including the 20 year old child, are considered to be liable for repayment of the overissuance claim."

Scenario: Parent applied for and was granted CalFresh benefits for a household of three, including an adult child. Later, it was determined the adult child was not residing in the home and a CalFresh overissuance was charted using a household size of 2. The adult child is stating (s)he was not aware (s)he were applied for and is disputing her status as a liable party.

10. REQUESTOR'S PROPOSED ANSWER:

a) No, the adult child is not liable to repay the overissuance even though the adult child was aided as a household member at the time of the overissuance as she was not a resident of the household.

b) An individual is not responsible to repay overissuances when it is determined they were not a part of the CalFresh household and unaware they were applied for.

11. STATE POLICY RESPONSE (CFPB USE ONLY):

State concurs with both A and B in the proposed response.
